

ANDREW JOHNSON BANK HIRES HEATHER GASS

Heather began her banking career at Andrew Johnson Bank in 2004 where she began working as a part time teller while attending East Tennessee State University. While working part time, she had the opportunity to work in the Bookkeeping and Accounting departments, in addition to the various branches of the bank.

Upon graduation with her Business Management degree from ETSU in 2007, she was accepted into AmSouth Bank's 12 month Retail Management Development Program where she trained under the senior leadership of AmSouth bank. Heather worked and trained through the AmSouth / Regions bank merger in 2007. While at Regions Bank, she held management positions and was chosen as an on-site trainer for new employees.

In 2011, Heather took the position of Branch Manager with Capital Bank in her hometown of Greeneville, Tennessee. Upon holding that role for a year and completing her Master's Degree at Carson Newman University, Heather then moved into the role of Executive Consultant for the state of Tennessee. In that role, she directly worked for the TN State Executive and supported the 62 branches in Tennessee, as well as held the Marketing Director position for the company in 2015.

Heather is excited to "come back home" and re-join the Andrew Johnson Bank family as "Training Officer" and continue her career in the community in which she was raised.
